Forecast for Wednesday 27 Nov 2024

Weather: Rain overnight, mainly light and patchy but perhaps a bit more persistent for a few hours. Rain tending to die out and clear east soon after dawn breaks. Cloudy at first but cloud thinning and breaking. Brighter in the afternoon with light winds and sunny spells, feeling cold with freezing level lowering to around 800m.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 600m: 40% improving to 90% cloud associated with early rain.

Low cloud and visibility: Broken cloud layers above 400m at first but the cloud bases lifting and thinning with just scattered cloud around 600m by mid morning, cloud continuing to lift and clear through the morning and by afternoon only patchy low cloud at times on the highest tops. Visibility will be poor initially in rain but will gradually improve during the morning and very good visibility is likely in the afternoon.
